Dear _____,

I'm happy you've decided to replace your missing or failing teeth with dental implants. I've already discussed the general information about receiving implants and the pros and cons of the recommended procedures with you. I've therefore enclosed a consent form for you to read, initial, and sign at your earliest convenience. All questions will be discussed and financial estimates will be presented to you before we proceed.

Options, such as premedication sedation, nitrous oxide, and general anesthesia in my office are also options depending on your anxiety level about the procedure.

Implants are quite a successful procedure with success rates in the 95-98 percent range. Once the implants osseointegrate into your jaw, "permanent " restorations may be placed. Transitional options will also be discussed to replace your teeth while the implants solidify. I am looking forward to working with you and restoring your mouth back to achieve optimal function.

Sincerely,

Drs. Rick and Mark Lubitz
